What's So Special About Buttermilk Pie?

Most people probably wrinkle up their noses at the mere thought of buttermilk, and we did too until we baked up a Buttermilk Pie and tasted the result!

An old-timey recipe culled from an 1880's southern church cookbook we found at an antiques store peaked our interest and we decided to try our hand at this almost forgotten southern dessert.

For weeks we tweaked the recipe until we got it just right, and then gave out samples to friends. The verdict? Delicious! We added this custard-like chess-style pie to our lunch menu and a new southern tradition was begun anew.

Each homemade Buttermilk Pie is made fresh every morning all by hand and served up by the slice with a generous dollop of fresh whipped cream and dusted with cinnamon. Whole pies can be purchased to go as well.

A couple of years ago I received a phone call from tv's Al Roker who had heard about our delicious pie and wanted to feature it on his "Roker On The Road" show on the Food Network. We were humbly honored to be selected and were delighted to be included on his show "Forgotten Southern Specialties."

Of course the heart of all things Southern is always celebrated with food: family reunions, church socials, picnics, or just spending time together sipping a tall glass of sweet iced tea! Food has always brought friends and families together.

We here at Feathernesters are glad that we can continue this warm homespun tradition!

Warmly,

Tony & Marc
